IMPACT

- The 2008 and 2011 Teaching, Research, and International Policy (TRIP) Survey of International Relations Faculty lists twenty-five scholars “who have produced the most interesting scholarship in the past five years.” (<http://irtheoryandpractice.wm.edu/projects/trip>). Erik Gartzke is listed in the 2008 report (tie for 23rd) and in 2011 (US results only, 20th). As the study notes, “very few scholars under the age of 50 rank amongst the most influential.”
- A 2006 report by Thompson Essential Science Indicators examines author productivity in the areas of “war,” “civil conflict,” “insurgency,” “political change,” “international peace” or “armed conflict,” based on a sample of 5,258 publications in 403 journals over the decade from 1996 to 2006. Erik Gartzke is listed as the 9th most productive researcher and ranked 15th in citations per article and 16th in total citations per author out of 5,311 authors from 1,507 institutions in 73 countries (<http://www.esi-topics.com/armed-conflict/index.html>).
